Introduction

An adjective clause is a multiword adjective that includes a subject and a verb.

An adjective clause usually comes after the noun it modifies and is made up of several words, which, like all clauses, will include a subject and a verb.

We can categorize the examples of these according to certain types of adverbial clause.

For example -

Adverbs of time

Adverbs of place

Adverbs of Manner

Adverbs of conditions

Example

Adverb clauses of time tell us about when something happens.

We can use conjunctions like ‘when’, ‘whenever’, ‘before’, ‘after’, ‘as’, ‘while’ ‘until’, ‘as soon as’, and ‘since’:

Look at this example here:

I stopped running when I saw my friend. Here ‘when’ shows that something happened at a certain time.

Adverb clauses of place tell us about where something happens. We can use ‘where’, ‘wherever’, and ‘everywhere’

Look at this example here:

Wherever I go, I always see McDonald’s.

Example

Adverb clauses of manner show us how something happens.

They usually begin with 'like', 'as though' or 'as if'

Look at this example here:

She looked as though she was in pain.

Adverb clauses of condition tell us about the circumstances under which something happens.

These clauses often begin with 'if', 'unless', or 'provided that'

Look at this example here:

I only watch TV if my favorite show is on.
